Methodology for Evaluation of Openness of State Archives (OSA)

Introduction

The public has the right of access to archives of public bodies. Openness of archives is not only an issue related to interests of historians or specialists, but an issue of access to information, which in itself is a human right. The OSA Methodology is envisioned to be universal with the goal of assessing the standards of access to archives, identifying the strengths and weaknesses of the legal frameworks and their enforcement firstly in post-soviet space and then around the globe.

Structure and Logic

The Methodology is composed of 88 indicators, each of which granted different weight and index of social importance.

The Methodology covers all the major components of openness of state archives: from the legislative framework, to access to archival files in the reading room and via online sources, and freedom of access to archival files/records and relevant databases (online sources, catalogues, inventories, etc.).

The selection of indicators for the Methodology was largely based on the principles of access to archives adopted by the International Council on Archives (ICA) that elaborated the following general principles:

- Archives and archivists should promote the widest possible access to archival materials and provide an impartial service to all users.
- Archives and archivists should respect both access to information and privacy, and act within the boundaries of relevant legislation.
- Institutions holding the archival fonds ensure that restrictions on access are clear and of stated duration, are based on pertinent legislation, acknowledge the right of privacy, and respect the rights of owners of private materials.
- The access rules apply equally to all individuals without discrimination. When a closed file is reviewed and access to it is granted to a member of the general public, the file is available to all other members of the public under the same terms and conditions.

Various best practices were also reviewed: the analytical report "Open Access to KGB Archives: Ukraine's Experience for Eastern Partnership Countries" ("Открытый доступ к архивам КГБ: Украинский опыт для стран восточного партнерства"), a guide-book "Right for the Truth" ("Право на правду"), as well as other best practices and adopted documents. We also analyzed all the archival and other relevant laws in each country to be evaluated.

The documents and standards mentioned above do not contain methodologies or indicators for evaluating archives; this we elaborated through cooperation with our partners. The resulting methodology is unique by its essence. All the indicators have been properly referenced.

During the indicator selection and elaboration process, an effort was made to ensure that our Methodology could be used for all state archives in the target states. The Methodology and its indicators were elaborated with the active participation of the organizations and independent experts, who have the most expertise and experience in given area.

The indicators are divided into five groups (benchmark indicators) that represent the key characteristics of a well-functioning system of open access to the state archives in post-soviet countries. These groups are:

- 1. Homogeneity of the legislative framework:
 - 1.1 General archival legislation;
 - 1.2 Other legislation referring to FOI and archives;
 - 1.3 Archive services:
- 2. Website: Archive websites and distant and online services;
- 3. Reading room: Services and procedures for the researchers physically working in the archives.

Limitations

Access to archives varies significantly by country. The OSA Methodology is intended to be applicable on a global scale, meaning that the indicators cannot be too specific and cannot cover all the possible variations and exceptions.

About the Project

The Methodology has been developed within the framework of the project - Enhancing Openness of State Archives in Former Soviet Republics.

The project was funded by the Open Society Institute Budapest Foundation (OSI) and has been implemented by a Georgia-based civil society organization Institute for Development of Freedom of Information (IDFI)on its initial stage together with the nine partner organizations or/and individual experts from each country in the Eurasian region covered by the project:

- Armenia Hranush Kharatyan, NGO "Hazarashen" Armenian Center for Ethnological Studies, Researcher
- Azerbaijan Eldar Zeynalov, Human Rights Center, Director, Journalist
- Belarus Dmitriy Drozd, Belarusian Documentation Center, Researcher
- Georgia: Anton Vatcharadze, Institute for Development of Freedom of Information (IDFI), Researcher
- Kazakhstan Araylim Musagallieva, Eurasian National University, Professor
- Kyrgyzstan Nurbek Toktakunov, Partner Group "Precedent", Director
- Moldova Igor Casu, Center for Study of Totalitarian Regimes and Cold War, State University of Moldova, Historian
- Russia –Lawyer
- Ukraine Ihor Chernichenko, Kharkiv Human Rights protection Group, Historian
- Uzbekistan Historian

In its initial stage, the project - Enhancing Openness of State Archive in Former Soviet Republics covers only the Eastern Partnership (EaP) Region, Russia, and some of the Central Asian states; however, we are planning to scale the methodology up to larger regions in the future. Due to a large number of archives in some countries (e.g. Russia, with 15 state archives on the federal level) not all the archives are evaluated in the above countries. We will continue to evaluate the archives that have not been evaluated at the first stage of the project in the future.

Scoring System

Indicators included in the OSA Methodology are granted different weight and provided by index of social importance, which is measured by one of the four qualitative indicators (4, 3, 2 or 1). Such indexes will show the importance of the indicator and its influence on the openness of archives.

Each indicator can be evaluated by the interim score from 0 to 1 points, depending on the completeness of the answer, or the indicator cannot be applied to the given archive:

- 1. Gives a complete answer to the question maximum 1 point.
- 2. Gives a high quality answer to the question 0.75
- 3. Gives a medium quality answer to the question 0.5
- 4. Gives a low quality answer to the question 0.25
- 5. Does not answer the question -0
- 6. The indicator cannot be applied to the given archive (-)

The final score of each indicator is calculated by multiplying its interim score by its social importance index.

For instance, if the indicator's social importance index is 4 and its interim score is 0.75 points, the final score of the indicator will be 3.

With a total of 88 indicators, openness of a state archive is rated on the scale of 0 to 257. The points will be converted to percentages for easier understanding and visualization.

At the same time, we are keeping in mind that not all the indicators can be applied to each state archive we are assessing. For example, if we are assessing archives which do not contain any fonds or files on repressive state institutions, we will not deduct points for non-relevant indicators. In such cases, the final result and the percentage will be calculated based only on relevant indicators.

Each scoring component is evaluated separately.

This scoring system and the structure of the methodology allows us to represent the results in two ways:

- 1. Results by Separate State Archives Each archive will be assessed with the relevant indicators. The results will be converted in percentages and the average result will be calculated.
- 2. Country Overall Results and Rating The country overall results are represented using percentages (0-100%). Countries are then ranked by their overall results.

Visualization

Visualizing the results of the assessment is crucial to the goal of the methodology. For this purpose, the overall points received by each country shall be shown graphically using the scale of 0-100%, divided into 4 quarters of a specific color:

- Low compliance with the OSA Standards 0% to 25% (red)
- Average compliance with the OSA Standards 26% to 50% (orange)
- Good compliance with the OSA Standards 51% to 75% (yellow)
- Excellent compliance with the OSA Standards 76% to 100% (green)

Visualizations will also include spider graphs depicting the countries' results by benchmark indicators and multi-colored bar graphs for comparing the countries' results in defined categories.

Terminology

This methodology uses universally accepted archival terminology as well as a few terms of its own design, in order to make the key distinctions easier. This terminology was adopted and put online by the ICA (see this link). Because of the specifics of the post-soviet archives and in order to avoid misunderstanding in some of the terms, we made our glossary bilingual, in English and Russian.

Evaluator's Commentary:

The Central State Archive of the Republic of Kazakhstan is one of the most important archives in the country. The Archive contains records concerning Kazakh history of XIX-XX centuries. The essential collection of records from the Soviet period are stored here. The Archive contains numerous files that uncover some of the aspects of the "red terror", e. g. the fonds of Revolutionary Committee concerning the management of Kyrgyz (Kazakh) Krai and local administrations. Records of republican importance can be found in the central archives.

The Central State Archive of the Republic of Kazakhstan contains fonds concerning the activity of the All-Russian Extraordinary Commission (VCheKa), the State Political Administration (OGPU) and People's Commissariat for Internal Affairs (NKVD) of Kazakh SSR. These records have been considered as classified for many years. Despite of this, the materials of the fonds are mainly superficial and generic. The reason for this is that many important files and records have been sent to the Party archives and central institutions in Moscow. The fonds of NKVD of the Kazakh SSR contain data ranging from the annual reports of the Ministry of Justice of Kazakh SSR to the persecutions in the Soviet labor camps. The information form the All-Union level institutions and local labor camps was sent to archival institutions. But because a considerable part of the records was destroyed after being scientifically and technically processed in 1948, the fonds that consists only of two inventories is not enough to elaborate upon the topic of a research. The fonds' records don't cover all the years, only some fragments were preserved. But never the less, we tend to assume that some of the records have not been declassified yet.

The Archive also has secret fonds. According to the Order of the People's Commissariat for Internal Affairs 'On measures for improving the administration of the Prisoners of War Camps NKVD' (February 24, 1943) the Administration of the camps for the prisoners of war was established in Kazakhstan. The analysis of the Archive gives us the ground to assume that the files of this body were stored in the fond 1390c "Section of Prisoners of War" of the Central State Archive of the Republic of Kazakhstan. But today there is no information in the Archive about this fond. Neither number of this fond, nor information about it is mentioned in the archival guide. We are inclined to think that either this fond has not been declassified yet, or it was handed over to the special archives of the law enforcement authorities. This circumstance makes the comprehensive research of this problem difficult. But despite of the given difficulties, the Central State Archive of the Republic of Kazakhstan is one of the most important among the Kazakh archives.

The legislation of Kazakhstan concerning archives keeps changing every year. The society is demanding access to the new archival sources from the archive. But the process of declassification of the records is developing slowly. One of the positive features of the archival work in Kazakhstan is that copying of the records and getting the social and legal notifications is free of charge, because all the archives are considered as state institutions. The legislation that regulates the archival activity is functioning well. We can bring as examples following laws and subordinate legal acts: the Law "On National Archive Fonds and Archives" (December 22, 1998), Regulations of receipt, storage and use of the documents of the National Archival Fonds and other archival documents by the archives of the public bodies and the private archives (ratified by the Order of the Minister of Culture and Sports of the Republic of Kazakhstan, December 22, 2014), Regulations on the research work in the reading halls of the state archives of the Republic of Kazakhstan" (October 2, 2000).

Nevertheless, the functioning of the archives should improve, the records should become more accessible. Many files form the Soviet period have not been declassified yet and are still unavailable.
